CONGRESS XI CELEBRATING 25 YEARS OF WHAT WE HAVE SEEN AND HEARD

“[Jesus said,] ‘Amen, Amen, I say to you, whoever believes in me will do the works that I do, and will do greater ones than these, because I am going to the Father’” John 14:12

In 1987, over 1500 Catholic Christians gathered at The Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. to revive the National Black Catholic Congress Movement that began in 1889. Our founder, Daniel Rudd, was convinced that the Catholic Church had a powerful message to proclaim within the Black community, across the nation, and around the world.

As they met in five congresses from 1889-1894, our ancestors in the Movement were not afraid to meet the challenges that existed within the Church and society. However, they remained hopeful for the potential of the transformative role of Catholic evangelization in the African-American community and beyond. They gave us the legacy of a faith that is engaged to follow the Great Commandment of the Lord (cf. Matthew 22:37-40) and to fulfill the Great Commission from the Lord (cf. Matthew 28:18-20).

Twenty-five years later, thousands will gather in Indianapolis for the National Black Catholic Congress XI from July 19-21, 2012.

God has done great things through us! Congress XI is a time to reflect on these accomplishments.

God invites us to do greater works as we consider the needs of our time. Faith that is engaged recognizes that active disciples in the Church need to be renewed and alienated disciples need to be reconciled. All are welcome to experience deeper faith in Christ, actively following Him within the fellowship of the Church. How do we raise the consciousness of each generation within the Church to be actively engaged within it?

How do we help one another to discover our distinctive vocation (i.e., married life or committed single life; consecrated religious life, diaconate, or priesthood) and remain faithful to it?

Our economy struggles to recover with high unemployment and rising poverty. Faith that is engaged addresses practical needs through parochial, educational, and social service institutions. It provides a message of hope that will build individuals, married couples, and families up when circumstances want to break them down. Faith that is engaged also advocates for policies which promote the common good, respecting the dignity of every human being.

Congress XI is a time to renew our commitment to address the challenges of the present.

Make plans now to join your fellow Catholic Christians to engage in this process of Sankofa. Let us remember where we have been so that we can continue to move confidently in the present and the future. God is continuing to do great things through us! Empowered by the Holy Spirit and equipped to fulfill our distinctive vocations within the Church, we are strengthened to joyfully fulfill our baptismal commitment to evangelize.

Congress XI is a time to rejoice with confidence in our future. See you there!
